

Tutoring and Sale of Materials

- A. Instructors shall not give private lessons for additional compensation to their own students enrolled in the College unless such students have been taking private lessons from the instructor before enrolling in his/her College course.
- B. Academic employees shall not sell materials to their own students.
- C. Instructor-initiated materials can be sold by the College Bookstore with no financial return to the instructor. Commercially published textbooks authored by College staff are exempt from this portion of the policy.
